Khao Yai National Park Kaeng Hin Peong & Khao Pheng Ma Prachinburi, Thailand

Khao Yai National Park was designated in September 1962 as Thailand's first national park. It is the nearest national park to Bangkok but one of the largest in the region national with a forest conservation area of 2168 kmsq. About 15 Park Ranger sub-stations surround Khao Yai National Park. Ranger Station 9 is located at Kaeng Hin Peong at the South-eastern fringe of Khao Yai. Sai Yai River (River water source from Khao Yai) runs across Kaeng Hin Peong and it is a popular place for nature exploration and white water rafting activities.

Kaeng Hin Peong is located within Prachinburi province. Here you will wake up to crisp morning air and fine bird songs that echo in the dense green forests surrounding you.

There are several resorts within Kaeng Hin Peong. These resorts offer plenty of activities for the adventure and nature lover. For example: white water rafting, kayaking, abseiling at a 34-foot tower, hovering 100 meters across the river, mountain biking, or just relaxing within the beauty of tropical flowers and various species of bird.

River Rafting in Sai Yai River at Kaeng Hin Peong can be all year round. White water rafting is available only from June to October. Otherwise, rafting on Sai Yai River is another type of experience where you will have more time to observe and appreciate the surrounding nature. Sai Yai River is surrounded by greenery on its both sides. The rafting will attract both adventure and nature lovers. During the low water season, Sai Yai is calm where Nature lovers get to enjoy the charming mystery of the tropical forest.

Khao Pheng Ma situated at the North-eastern corner of the Khao Yai National Park is a well-known place to observe the rare Jungle Guar (Seladang in Malay). Khao Pheng Ma is covered with replanted young forest has observatory towers built for Gaur watching in its wild habitat.
